Dr. Carlos Montezuma, Yavapai

“Museums of the 21st century that interpret the cultural life and history, past and present, of Native peoples and communities, are at a seminal and transformational crossroads. The voices of Native peoples themselves have become authoritative and integral components of the conversation, and now the challenge is to interweave these complex threads into the full and interconnected tapestry of the American cultural experience.” Richard West

The Dr. Carlos Montezuma Honorary Lecturer is selected each year for their contribution to American Indian communities on a national scale, embodying the social activism and advancement of Native peoples by the Dr. Montezuma.
